Another historically important event associated with our community took place just before the Revolutionary War, the signing of the Fincastle Resolutions near the Lead Mines in early 1775. The Fincastle Resolutions have been described as the first American declaration of freedom from the British Empire, as they preceded both the Mecklenberg Declaration and the Philadelphia Declaration of Independence.

After the Revolution the Lead Mine was then sold to Moses Austin, for whom Austinville was named. Moses' son, Stephen, later to become famous as one of the founders of Texas, was born here in 1793.

When the Austins moved West, the Mine changed ownership a number of times. Thomas Jackson, one of the owners during the early 19th Century, began construction of the Shot Tower in 1809 and completed it in 1824. The Tower was used for making shot until the 1850's. Lead from the Mine supplied the entire South during the War Between the States.

Shortly after the War the lead ore became depleted, but rich zinc deposits were discovered,

Thus Colonel Chiswell's discovery of 200 years ago has become, year by year, increasingly important to the economy of our area. This is graphically illustrated when one compares prices and wages of over a hundred years ago with those of today. A page from the Lead Mines Ledger of 1836 shows that D. B. Sanders, Jacob Collins, and Thomas Jackson paid 20c a pound for coffee, 12c a dozen for fish hooks, and a twist of tobacco 75c. Although these prices are lower than those of today, other pages from ledgers of the same period show that wages were as low as $15.00 per month, so today's workers at the Mine actually fare considerably better than their ancestors of 1836.

The Lead Mines Ruritan Club has recently acquired the Shot Tower from the Jackson heirs and is at present restoring it. Thus we are assured that our Tower will be preserved as an important historical and economic landmark in our community.
